David Cunningham is Managing Director of Baker Robbins & Company, the leading law firm and legal department technology consultancy and now part of Thomson Reuter's Technology Consulting Services. For the past 20 years, he has led the firm's technology strategy services and worked with executive and IT management of the majority of the world's largest firms. David provides quarterly executive briefings on the state and business implications of legal IT benchmarks. He leads one of Baker Robbins' global practices, the Strategic Technology Services group, which includes the firm's services related to IT strategy, mergers, mission critical infrastructure and IT facilities. David is also as a judge for the Managing Partner Forum's 'Best Use of Technology' Award for UK-based and European firms and a regular speaker at national legal events on strategic planning, enterprise risk management, process maturity and outsourcing.
